 - Exemplary performance from the department in the accreditation process
 - Assessment of educational outcomes along with Cal Poly's success in competitions was a highlight of the accreditations process.
 - Anticipating a smooth transition back to in-person instruction. We will now be able to leverage what we learned through a digital interface to get more direct participation from industry
 - CAED is looking for "experiences" that they can offer their second-year students living on campus which provides them an opportunity to get together as teams to create something with their hands. "Something fun and low pressure for a Saturday afternoon." Maybe something similar to the CM BBQ?
 - Students are interested in improving their software skills and a lack involvement in computer labs has resulted in a gap in education that results through less peer-to-peer instruction.
- Student Trends
 - Education through ZOOM/Teams/Adobe
 - Thank you to all folks who donated PPE!!!! Was a challenge with not being able to share PPE from one person to another through the pandemic.
 - Reinvented the land surveying course through the use of new total station equipment. This included laser scanning and creating a revit model / digital twin of the CMAC building.
 - Community Service projects were on hold for quite some time, however, projects began in spring and have seen great success.
